Wing Spar Testing - June Update

It has been just over a month since my last update, so I thought I would just write a short note to let you all know that testing is progressing well. We have managed to test 87 planes to date, out of a total of 161. Our first batch of repaired wings have also just arrived back from the Czech Republic – the repairs on the 10 wings were completed in just a 4 week turnaround including transport. Our thanks to Evektor for this efficient service especially during the flying season.

Due to repairs needed on flying school aircraft, and staff holidays we will be spending the next few weeks back at base (apart from the wings we have already booked in). We will continue wing testing but only on wings brought in by trailer to our premises. We will restart our remote testing schedule again at the beginning of July. It would be useful if those of you who have already booked holidays for the summer, when your aircraft will not be available for testing, could let us know the dates, so we can attempt to work around you.

On a good note we can now confirm that we will not be charging carriage for wings that have to go back to Evektor for repairs – they have agreed to cover this cost.

Finally we would like to thank everyone who has given help and support during this process – we have been amazed by the generosity, attitude and helpfulness of Eurostar owners. Some of you have looked after Chris when he has been on site, feeding him, helping with paperwork etc. Others have helped by removing and refitting wings for owners that have flown in, and one person even lent his good wing to a flying school who's opposite wing to his had failed! You Eurostar owners are truly wonderful and Cosmik feel privileged to have you as customers.

Best Regards

Mikaela
